Nutritional information

Every living cell in the body needs essential fatty acids.

Omega 3's are a special type of long chain polyunsaturated fatty acids (PUFA). They are known as one of the "good" fats. The most important components of Omega 3 are commonly known as EPA (eicosapentaenoic acid), DHA (docosahexaenoic acid), and DPA (docosapentaenoic acid).

Nucleic acids are composed of carbon, oxygen, hydrogen, nitrogen and phosphorous. These are the largest molecules in the body and their structural units are nucleotides. Nucleotides are part of the DNA and RNA. They are very, very basic and essential elements in the cell structure.

Amino Acid Profile

Shogun Koi Nutrition is rich in all essential and non-essential amino acids, in the correct quantities and in the correct balance needed by koi. Amino Acids are the "building blocks" of the body.
